Tall standards of white hydrangeas and lilies and many lighted candles decorated the long drawing-room at "Meadow Grove," the lovely old Carter home in Fauquier County, near Marshall, yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock for the marriage of Miss Mary Welby Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Beverley, of "Blandfield," a drapery of trailing vines and fragrant white flowers outlined the windows and doorways, and the improvised altar, where Rev. Herbert S. Osborne performed the ceremony, was banked with Ascension lilies. The halls and dining-room were arranged throughout with yellow flowers, and garlands of the same blossoms draped the winding stair, down which the bride and her maid of honor came. Mrs. George Mc-

Gill Carter, of Philadelphia, played the wedding music. The bride wore a lovely wedding gown fashioned of ivory satin and rare old lace and made with a court train. Her veil of illusion was fastened to her hair with orange blossoms and pearls, and she wore antique pearl ornaments. She carried a presentation bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley, and Mr. Carter gave his daughter away, with orange blossoms and pearls, the groom and his best man, William Welby Beverley, of this city, and Miss Juliet Randolph Carter was her cousin's maid of honor and only attendant. Her gown was of pale yellow charmeuse combined with tulle, and she carried an armful of Golden Gate roses. The groomsmen were Messrs. Taylor Scott Carter, of Cincinnati, brother of the bride; Hill Beverley, Jr., of Essex; R. Welby Carter, of Norfolk, and Edward C. Turner, of the Plains, all cousins of the bride.

will be an important event of the fall season, is to be celebrated some time early in November.

Ushers for Convention.
The convention of the Daughters of the Confederacy to be held here next week is an event of the greatest interest to society in Richmond, and a great deal of handsome entertaining will be done in honor of the delegates attending it. The first meeting will be held on Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock in Lee Camp Hall, and the ushers for the convention include Misses Nora Douglas Randolph, Julia Grant Moore, Reba Bradley, Kate Chapman, Mrs. Curtis Virginia Hinford, Ellen Bagby, Pearl Oakley, Annie Williams, Ollie Gibson, Louise Williams, Harriet Lightfoot, Martha Purcell, Nannie Miller, Alice Angel and Mrs. Henry Eppes.

Entertained in Alabama.
The Governor of Alabama and Mrs. O'Neil gave a reception Monday afternoon at the executive mansion at Montgomery in honor of John Barrett, director-general of the Pan-American Union, and Dr. Clarence H. Brown, managing director of the Southern Commercial College.

Governor and Mrs. O'Neil are very pleasantly remembered in Richmond, having attended the Conference of Governors held here last December. A great deal of entertaining was done at the time for Governor and Mrs. O'Neil, as well as their daughter, Miss O'Neil, who accompanied them to Richmond.

First Fall Meeting.
The first fall meeting of the Confederate Memorial Literary Society was held yesterday morning at the Confederate Museum, with a large number of members in attendance. An interesting loan was made to the museum, in the form of the wax impression of the Great Seal Confederacy, made by Joseph S. Wynn, of London, England, as identical with the original seal, a fact made by him. This interesting relic is loaned by John Mason, son of the late Commissioner James M. Mason, to the Confederate Memorial Literary Society of Richmond, to be returned when required by John Mason or his legal representative. Commissioner Mason gave this wax impression of the seal to his daughter, who recently came to her brother, John Mason, now of Richmond.

A number of other gifts were received yesterday morning. Mrs. W. Rice, of Cleveland, Ohio, sent a tent captured from General Robert S. Garnett at Phillips, it having come into the hands of her husband, who was a Federal officer. Mrs. Rice also sent a foil that belonged to General Garnett. Mrs. E. S. Wilson, in the name of her brother, John Donnan, of this city, gave several Confederate battle flags, certificates and one registered bond. Mrs. Hyde, of Chattanooga, Tenn., sent a card to the museum from Mr. Pemberton, which was found on the body after the battle of Seven Pines.

The year book of the society is now ready, and may be obtained by members at the museum. It was decided at the meeting yesterday that the year book will be given to the Virginia Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy on the afternoon of Friday, October 3, from 5 to 6 in the museum. An invitation was also extended to the society by Mrs. G. W. T. Kern to attend the historical evening at the Jefferson Auditorium Thursday evening, October 3, at 8 o'clock.

Called Meeting.
All chairmen of committees, committees and those entertaining delegates, whether they belong to the Richmond Chapter or not, are asked to be present or send names of delegates or alternates to the called meeting to be held in Lee Camp Hall to-morrow evening, October 3, at 8 o'clock. All visiting delegates or alternates in the city are also invited to attend.

Bareford-Muse.
Mr. and Mrs. John Richard Muse, of Okeana, Essex County, have announced the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Palma Muse, to John Bareford, of the Centre Cross. The wedding is to take place to-day in Baltimore.

Miss Miriam Briggs has returned to this city after a short visit to her cousin, Miss Irene Briggs, of Charlottesville. Miss Briggs was enroute to her home here, after an automobile ride to the home of her father, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Lyle, Miss Kate Glazebrook, of Suffolk, and Miss Nell Wynn, of this city, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Ham announce the engagement of their daughter, Jessie Lee, to Rev. Hawes Palmer, formerly of Summers, Cumberland County, Va., now of Heaven, Oklahoma.

Mr. and Mrs. Haddon S. Watkins announce the engagement of their daughter, Edith May, to Dr. C. S. Pitt, son of Dr. and Mrs. R. H. Pitt, also of this city. The marriage, which will be an important event of the fall season, is to be celebrated some time early in November.

WERETHER IS NOT IN DIPLOMATIC SERVICE

Baron Does Not Even Hold Commission as Reserve Officer of German Army.

BY LA MARQUE DE FOSTENOV.
ALTHOUGH THE grandson of Baron Rio Branco, formerly Minister of Foreign Affairs in Rio Janeiro, the German for many years in foreign capitals, including Washington, a minister plenipotentiary and as ambassador, does not belong to the diplomatic service of the Kaiser. He does not even hold a commission as a reserve officer of the German army.

It is only fair that this fact should be emphasized, in view of the charges brought by his wife, daughter of Baron Rio Branco, formerly Minister of Foreign Affairs in Rio Janeiro, the German for many years in foreign capitals, including Washington, a minister plenipotentiary and as ambassador, does not belong to the diplomatic service of the Kaiser. He does not even hold a commission as a reserve officer of the German army.

The baroness is suing her husband for divorce at Rio, and while she has other causes for complaint against him, her principal point in demanding a dissolution of her marriage is that she does not wish to be concerned in the betrayal of her own country, nor to have anything more to do with one who has abused the hospitality of her father, and of her people in such a fashion. She has made out a very strong case against him, so strong, indeed, that the baron, who was entirely without any means of his own when he married her, has found it prudent to leave Brazil, and to hasten home to his native land.

The association of the German legation at Rio in the affair, as the alleged recipient of the baron's stolen secrets, the "Brazil government," is to say the least, awkward, and may lead to a transfer of Envoy Michelles to some other post. For his position at Rio is certain to be less pleasant, in view of these disclosures, than heretofore.

The baroness is well known in the United States, and spent much of her girlhood as Amelia di Rio Branco in and around New York and at Washington, where her father passed many years of his life. She is a devoted daughter of her native land, and especially as the plenipotentiary of Brazil in the arbitration commissions organized for the settlement of the Franco-Brazilian and Argentine Republic, and Brazil and Great Britain. For his achievements as such he received a vote from the Brazilian Congress of $60,000, and an annuity of $2,000 a year for life, and for that of his daughter, Baroness Werther. His father was the statesman most prominently identified with the abolition of slavery in Brazil.

Baron Rio Branco owes his title to inheritance like so many other Brazilian noblemen, to marriage. It may be remembered that the late Dom Pedro, last Emperor of Brazil, entertained the most profound respect for the imperial title, and never lost an opportunity of showing how little he thought of them.

Finding on one memorable occasion that there was hardly any response to the appeals which he had issued for the support of the imperial constitution, a hospital, which was in course of erection at Rio, he caused it to be known that the title of baron would be conferred upon every man who subscribed $500, and that of count upon every one who gave $1,000. Immediately a stream of money began to pour into the coffers of the building fund of the hospital. The misery of the poor and of the afflicted had not touched the vanity, but the imperial appeal to their vanity had not been in vain.

The great day of the opening of the hospital came. An enormous crowd was gathered together. Everybody was gazing up to the portico of the new building, over which there was a large marble slab, on which the dedication was inscribed in great letters of gold, and which the Emperor was to unveil. When Dom Pedro, at the proper moment, caused the curtain to fall, the new building was revealed. It had been assigned special reserved places at the ceremony, as subscribers to the building fund, were able to read their sovereign's estimation of their nobility in the following inscription, that stared out in the face: "Human vanity to human misery."

Frederick Booth Tucker, who, after having held the office of magistrate, collector and assistant commissioner in the Indian reservation at the service of India, in order to join the Salvation Army, subsequently securing American citizenship while in charge of Salvation Army work in the United States, is by no means the only American citizen to possess the imperial British Order of the Kaiser-i-Hind, as alleged in both English, Canadian and American newspapers. There are several native-born Americans who have been thus decorated by King Edward, and also by King George; all of them missionaries who have distinguished themselves by the good work which they have done among the natives, in districts afflicted by famine and plague.

Notable among its American recipients is the Rev. James Carruthers Ewing, D. D., a Pennsylvanian, and a member of the Presbyterian denomination, who, after holding for many years the presidency of the Forman Christian College of Punjab, is now vice-chancellor of the State University of Punjab, at Lahore. He received the Kaiser-i-Hind Order from King Edward in 1907, in recognition of his work in the relief of the earthquake, which spread so much ruin and devastation in the Punjab.

The insignia consists of an oval-shaped badge, in gold for the first class, in silver for the second, surrounded by the imperial crown, and suspended on the left breast by a dark blue ribbon. On the one side is the royal and imperial cipher of Queen Victoria, and on the reverse the words: "Kaiser-i-Hind" in the center and "For public service, in India" around the border.

It has also been bestowed upon a very restricted number of women, who took a most active part in the relief work during the visitation of plague and famine of the last ten or fifteen years, among the American-born recipients of this class being the late Mary, Lady Curzon, wife of the one-time Viceroy of India and daughter of the late Levi Z. Leiter, of Washington, D. C.

NEGRO UNLOCKS DOOR OF JAIL CELL

Three Negroes Sent On to Grand Jury for Aiding Murderer to Escape.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Lexington, Va., September 24.—Charles Jones and Theo Jones, father and brother, respectively, of Purcell Jones, the escaped criminal from Lexington Jail, who was under sentence to serve a term in the penitentiary of twelve years for murder, were tried to-day before Justice Pierce for aiding the prisoner to escape. Minnie Watkins, colored cook at the jail, confessed that she was bribed by Jones to secure the keys to the jail and unlock the doors and cell for Purcell's escape.

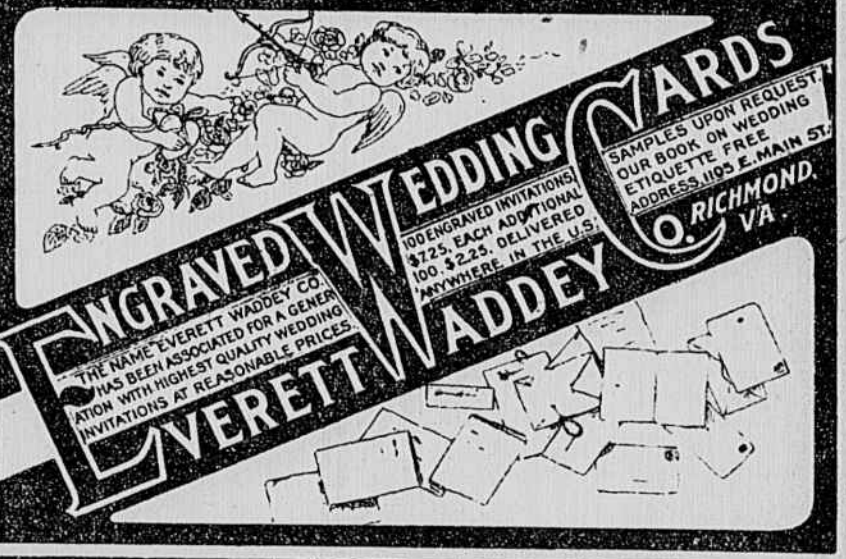

All the negroes were sent on to the grand jury. On receipt of telegrams from Lexington announcing that Purcell Jones had escaped, Governor Mann offered a reward of $150 for his capture. The Governor was advised by W. T. Shields, a member of his staff, and J. L. Morrison, sheriff, and O. C. Jackson, Mayor of Lexington, that Jones, recently sentenced to serve twelve years in the penitentiary for the murder of a negro man in Rockbridge County, had been released from jail by his friends. Sheriff Morrison and the jailer of Lexington immediately offered a reward of $250 for the arrest of Jones. The county authorities will supplement this by $100, and with $150 offered by the Governor, there is now a reward of $500 for the arrest of the negro. The Governor wired the Commonwealth's attorney to keep him informed as to developments.

Matthews-Sawyer.
(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Norfolk, Va., September 24.—A charming wedding was solemnized at Epworth Methodist Episcopal Church Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, when Miss Blanche Louise Sawyer, became the wife of Luther Preston Matthews. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Thomas Smoot, and the bride was given in marriage by her father, Edw. Chapman Sawyer. The bride was preceded by her maid of honor, Miss Helen Roberts, of Joliet, Ill. The two bridesmaids were Miss Edna Goettner, of Chicago, and Miss Leila Benson, of Gloucester. Chester Prince acted as best man, and Herman Furr, of Richmond; W. C. H. Enos, Spencer Hart, Douglas Brooks and S. T. Stancell, of Norfolk, acted as ushers.

Approaching Marriage.
(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Standardsville, Va., September 24.—Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of D. S. Deane, Jr., of Greene County, which will be solemnized at Rochelle Methodist Church, on Tuesday afternoon, October 1 at 2 o'clock. Mr. Deane is the son of D. S. Deane, Sr., a former member of the Board of Supervisors of Greene County, and Miss Weaver is the daughter of William Weaver, one of Madison's largest farmers.

Graham-Scott.
(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
Lynchburg, Va., September 24.—Miss Elizabeth N. Scott and George W. Graham, both of this city, were married Tuesday afternoon at Newport, Ky. Mr. Graham and Miss Scott left here Monday afternoon, intending to be married yesterday and make their future home in Cincinnati.
